DEDICATORY ADDRESS,

Spoken by Mr. HODGKINSON, Oct. 29, at the opening of the NEW FEDERAL THEATRE, and, by desire, on the 30th Oct. the evening of the President's Birth Day.

Written by THOMAS PAINE, A. M.
Author of Adams and Liberty, &c. &c.

☞ The old Federal Theatre was destroyed by fire Feb. 4, 1798, four years after it was first erected.

Flammis refectum, ruinis virescit.

ONCE more, kind patrons of the Thespian art,
Friends to the science of the human heart,
Behold the temple of the muse aspire,
A Phœnix Stage, which propagates by FIRE!
Each fault rescinded, and each grace renew'd,
By magic rear'd, and with enchantment view'd,
Our dome, new mantled, mid its ravag'd wall,
Stands, like ANTÆUS, stronger by its fall:—
And like CREUSA's ghost, in Trojan strife,
Its spectre rises larger than its life!*
Ye, who have oft with pleas'd observance trac'd
Each latent charm our mimic life has grac'd,
Whose hearts yet ache, when retrospection views
The woes and wanderings of the scenic Muse,
Since from the cradle of her young renown,
Her infant warblings lur'd the listening town,
To the dark æra, when one luckless hour
Her empire ravag'd, and dethron'd her power,
Till proudly towering o'er the Gothic waste
Thro' chaos smil'd this paradise of taste:
The mystic maids who here unite their reign,
Whom bards and actors oft implore in vain,
With truth's warm rapture, bid you welcome all,
Gents, belles, and godships, to their fairy hall,—
Where SHAKESPEAR's spirit, who delights to flit
O'er critics' noses, snoring in the pit,
Like Hamlet's father, arm'd from casque to sandals,
Shall "visit oft the glimpses of"—our candles!

If blest by those kind smiles, whose beams impart
Pulse to the brain, and vigor to the heart,
The Drama now her languid powers will rear,
The laugh awaken, and exhale the tear;
Correct, yet animate, she aims to join,
SALVATOR's clouds, with HOGARTH's waving line,
And hopes, aspiring, by your favour warm'd,
Again to charm you, as she once has charm'd.

Nor need her friends, with fear's retorted glance,
Recall the horrors of her late mischance,
When wrapt in bursting flames, and awful gloom,
She saw her temple mouldering to her tomb!
No more shall NERO's ravish'd eye behold,
The usurping element these walls enfold;
Nor shall one tear from houseless genius start,
To glut the savage pleasure of his heart!

To guard our fane, APOLLO tun'd his lyre,
And leagued the Gods of water and of fire;—
Crump'd VULCAN deign'd his Cyclop den to quit,
And clothe in Panoply the Dome of Wit;
While NEPTUNE gave an urn, of such vast use,
'Tis always filling, like the widow's cruse!

Now, (heaven forbid!) by hidden ways and means,
Should whelming fire again invest our scenes,
Lest on your heads the blazing roof should fall,
We'll spring the Aqueduct, and drown you all!†
"I'll burn first, smoke me," cries a spruce young Bobby,
"Splash me, I shan't be fit to walk the lobby!
"If roast or drown's the word, your fire commence, Sir,
"That clowniſh water always spots my spencer!"

How wise men differ! Water, some would think,
Would wash away the stain of taylor's ink!
But don't swoon, beaus! another mode we'll try,
To save your lives, and keep your ruffles dry.
From fire and water, your escape is certain;
Your shield of safety is our IRON CURTAIN!‡

(The Iron Curtain is here let down)

[Here Mr. HODGKINSON retires as if finishing the Address, then returns hastily, and speaks in great agitation:]

Ladies and Gentlemen! my duty claims,
To tell you that our Stage is all in flames!
The fire, tho' strange to you the sight might be,
First caught Mount Blanc, and then burnt up the sea;
The actors, like Octavian from the cave,
Run from the Green room, not to help, but rave;
While each one scampers in the others' way,
Like sops' umbrellas in a rainy day!
But let no belle in sweet hysterics fall,
Our IRON CURTAIN will protect you all!

(Curtain rises.)‖

In elder time, when first the Stage was rear'd,
'Twas nurs'd by patriots, and by traitors fear'd;
Its glowing scenes the fire of States supplied,
For Valor's praises wak'd Ambition's pride;—
And still the Drama, with corrected zeal,
Exists an engine of the public weal,
Smear'd with Sedition, should the hand profane
Of plotting knaves, our nation's Chief arraign,
The indignant Stage would glory in the task,
From lurking demagogues to strip the mask;
Drag the dark traitor into public shame,
And nail him to the pillory of fame!
In such a cause, the powers of verse would rise,
'Till, fear'd and headless, Faction's hydra dies;
And the stern Eagle would suspend his wing,
To listen while the Federal Muses sing.‖

No scite of clime can long protect a race,
Whose souls are reckless of their realm's disgrace.
Bid stormy oceans roll, and mountains rise,
FACTION will cross them, and pollute your skies;
Her curs'd miasma speeds its fatal way,
The gale impregnates, and attaints the day;
Her subtle root with equal vigor strikes,
In Gallia's hotbed, or in Holland's dykes.
On coldest shores, her rank luxuriance grows,
As HECLA flames mid THULE's endless snows.

Where Laws are fashion'd by the public will,
The helm of state demands a master's skill.
The social compact is a bond so weak,
The feuds of party can the cement break;
When crack'd, like RUPERT's drop it mocks control,
Snap but the point, and you destroy the whole.

In such mild climes, if true to freedom's cause,
The people's virtue will support the laws;
And Public Spirit crush, with arm elate,
The fiend, who dares "to clog the wheels of state."

In France, whose motley breed extremes delight,
Who grin like monkeys, or like tygers fight,
Autun's meek priest, whose conscience knows no qualm,
Except the cravings of an itching palm,—
Who, born a miser, and a prelate rear'd
His flock deserted, when their fleece was shear'd—
The ancient patriots from their niches jostles,
And calls French pirates, Liberty's apostles!
This tho' the Bishop spoke it, is no brag,
For he's the Judas, and still bears the bag!

But thanks to heaven, who propp'd our wavering state,
And sav'd its glory from Venetian fate,
This silkworm knave in vain has wound his maze,
In vain his basilisk eye has fix'd its gaze;
In vain the holy pimp his toils has spread,
And smooth'd Delilah's lap for Sampson's head!

Led to the altar, by his wiles ensnar'd,
COLUMBIA stood, for sacrifice prepar'd;
High flam'd the pyre; her struggling arms were bound;
The steel was lifted for the fatal wound;
When, like the Angel, who by God's command,
The filial off'ring sav'd from Abraham's hand,
Our guardian ADAMS, rob'd in light divine,
Burst thro' the clouds which veil'd the impious shrine;
The dagger seiz'd, the felon cords releas'd,
And snatch'd the victim from th' apostate Priest!

France stood aghast;—the passing wonder ran;
The Five kings trembled in their dark divan!
Compell'd new schemes of vengeance to devise,
They chang'd the Lyon's for th' Hyæna's cries.
No more their menac'd wrath allain'd our ears;—
In sooth they seem'd "like Niobe, all tears!"

As some old Bawd, whoall her life hath been
A fungus, sprouting from the filth of sin;
Whose dry trunk seasons in the frost of vice,
Like Radish, sav'd from rotting, by the ice;
When threatning bailiffs first her conscience awe,
Not with the fear of shame, but fear of law,
Sets out at sixty, in contrition's search,
Rubs garlic on her eyes, and goes to church!

Thus Europe's Courtezan, well vers'd in wiles,
Whose kisses poison, while the harlot smiles,
With pious sorrow hears our cannon roar,
And swears devoutly, that she'll sin no more!
Our rescued nation long will bless the day,
Which hail'd their ADAMS cloath'd in civic sway;
Which saw again our Eagle's pinions reard,
His olive courted, and his arrows fear'd.

Long shall the fame of our illustrious Sage,
The peerless statesman of a peerless age,
With quenchless splendor beam thro' many a clime,
And light the darkling avenues of time.
His deeds, on glory's marble page engrav'd,
Shall live coeval with the realm he sav'd;
And when, in heaven belov'd, as honor'd here,
He shines the regent of some brighter sphere,
Nations shall mark the epoch of his birth,
With festal gratitude, and sainted mirth;
And ages, yet unborn, with grateful breast,
Shall rise, and call the shade of ADAMS blest.

* The New Federal Theatre is not only more elegant and commodious than the former one; but it will also contain nearly double the number of people.

† The Aqueduct in the Theatre, by means of a leathern hose, will throw water to any part of the house.

‡ The Iron Curtain, which is of sufficient thickness to prevent the communication of fire, from the stage to the audience, is in two pieces, which are supposed to weigh 4,500 wt.

‖ An allusion to the Eagle in the Dome of the Theatre, which is painted in the attitude above described.

Communications.

AT a moment when the spirit of party is lulled, rather than extinguished, it may not be amiss to awaken the minds of Americans, to a sense of the advantages they enjoy, and if possible to rouse from their lethargy those listless souls who are indifferent to all acquisitions except personal ease, and in whose heart the amor patriæ was never known to beat.

Whence this torpor? Does your government stand upon a rock? Is there no danger from without and are you assured of having no enemies within? At the sound of Columbia has your pulse ceased to thrill? Has time blotted out the wrongs for which you fought and bled! Are you insensible to the advantages you possess, "by the solid basis of liberty, the liberty of mind?" Are the recent instances of plunder, rapine and murder, obliterated or extenuated? Believe me my countrymen, the evil spirit that lately hovered o'er you, "is not dead but sleepeth," and has only become lethargic from your energy. Still the voice of faction! persevere, in the glorious call your country has lately made! and when your WASHINGTON is within your gates, shew him by your virtue, you can hope for the favor of Heaven, by your zeal his applause, and by your conduct the good wishes of the world.

MORE
About the XVIII. Century.

MR. FENNO,

In this general scarcity of news, please to indulge an old correspondent with a small portion, in one of the columns of your very useful paper, for another scrap concerning the eighteenth century. All the pieces you have hitherto published on the subject have been written to defend one side of the question, except the quotations from Porcupine's gazette; and unless some other reply appear, I am afraid the important subject will be dropped.

WHEN we travel through time or space, and compute our progress, we generally speak, or write, on what is past. Thus, when we journey on a road, and come to a mile-stone, whether of 1 or of 100, we say so much is past: the stone is not placed at the beginning of the mile, but at the end of it. It is necessary to settle this idea clearly. When I take out my watch, and, looking on the dial, behold the hand pointing to 1, in a second of time more, I say that one hour is past, and it is going for 2. In the same manner, when I say that my son is one year, or nine years old, I mean that his first or his ninth year is past, and that he has entered into his second or tenth year. So, if I meet with an old man, bending under the weight of time and infirmity, and he informs me, when I ask him his age, that he is 99, I reckon not only that he has lived so many years, but that he has entered into his 100th year; that he has passed through one century, and entered into a second.

Bring this manner of reckoning to the question before you, and you will not be puzzled to comprehend the reason why the seventeenth century was past, and gone with the years before the flood, as soon as our fathers began to date 1700—or why, as soon as we shall begin to date January the 1st, 1800, the eighteenth century will expire, and the nineteenth will immediately issue from the womb of time. Unless we adopt this mode of reckoning, we shall inevitably make every century rob the succeeding century of one year; and in counting centuries, we shall contradict our universal rule in denominating our own ages. There is not much weight in the objection of your correspondent's A. B. where he says that, "If the eighteenth century end with the 31st of December 1799, the nineteenth century will of course begin with the 1st of January 1800; and that should this be the case, the first century must have commenced with the 1st of January in the year 0."—What would there be strange in this! Is not this the way in which he computes his own age? Whatever his age may be, it must have commenced with 0, with respect to itself. Nor is there any danger that by this reckoning we shall fix the commencement of our series of centuries twelve months before the christian æra; for if with him we "Suppose, that our Saviour had remained on earth until the 31st of December 1799," and, agreeably to our system, that he was born January the 1st, in the year 0, he would be completely 1800 years old; and of course the 1st of January 1800 will be the first day of the nineteenth century.

In throwing these thoughts before the public, I am far from feeling a wish to protract this trifling dispute. I expect that in little more than thirteen months, if I live so long, to be landed in the nineteenth century, and to see all the christian world unite with me in opinion on the subject. There is at present much more important business that calls for the public attention; the means of securing our cities and our country against the introduction of the physical, moral and political plagues of France and her islands. If our cities are not better guarded against her pestilential fevers, they will ere long be depopulated; and unless our country and government is fortified against her infernal machinations, we shall soon be plunged into an abyss of anarchy and atheism; we shall not long dispute about the commencement of a century of the christian æra; the calendar itself will be wholly abolished.

Z.

THE respect for the hero WASHINGTON proceeds warm from the heart. It does not consist in empty show. The external appearance of the grand escort was a small part of the respect paid to the defender of his country. The preparations to receive him were truly splendid, notwithstanding the short notice of his approach.

If we only view it from Chester, the heart exults for joy. Four troops of horse from Philadelphia, marched thither the evening he arrived. The houses there were highly illuminated. The whole troops saluted the General, with trumpets echoing "Hail Columbia &c." At the repetition of the name of Washington, all were uncovered, all hailed their Chief. In the morning the United States frigate gave a grand salute.

The troops already mentioned, M'Pherson's Blues, the Chester county horse, the Germantown and other volunteers escorted the General to his lodging, amidst a welcome from the hearts of the people.

When the General advanced from the Middle-Ferry, a spectacle presented itself which swelled every heart with joy—the involuntary tears in floods rolled from every cheek. From the sand banks to the Centre house, the right was lined with the people from the tents, Mr. Miercken and the other superintendents at their head.

The children formed the first column, the women the second, and the men, composing an advanced guard with presented arms, formed the third column in this venerating phalanx, which was drawn up in such order as would have done honor to regular troops, the whole forming one line, where universal silence and respect prevailed; every countenance was big with joy. Methought I saw the hearts of the children leap with gladness, meditating unspeakable satisfaction. Could I have read their thoughts, it must have been, "We shall never be forlorn while Washington lives; our table shall ever be full, and bodies covered from the chilling blast; death hath swept our fathers, our mothers, our sisters, our brothers,—but the Father of our country lives!—let us follow his example to honor and bless!" Who can imagine the grateful thoughts which crowded in the female mind. It might be, "I have lost a husband, a mother, a loving child, my every hope—Ah my spirit thank thy God, the leader and defender of our nation lives and triumphs! I shall never be destitute while guarded by an honored and tried general; my country shall be protected while he is leader. The flowing bounty of the affluent and generous public, shall ever place a full table between me and want. And men like those who now present me, comfortably fed and warmly clothed, shall ever live to put their lives betwixt me and want, despair and death."

The minds of the men must have conceived something noble and heroic. "My country has been plundered, my city afflicted: yet I have shared of the remaining portions of the rich. These presented arms a pledged, that when you bid us, we will cheerfully attend you through every peril and danger, to ease your burden and share your toils. We will defend our benefactors who fed and clothed our wives and children when hungry and naked—when disease and death had driven us from our homes, and deprived us of our usual means of support and comfort."

Were we to allow conjecture to proceed, she would suggest the following ideas as flowing from the hearts of the superintendents:—"These persons, most venerable Sire! which we now present before you, are a remnant saved from the destroying pestilence: our efforts to shield them from destruction, have been blessed with success;—the bounty of a liberal public has matured our hopes, and crowned our labours. Sensible of your worth, they venerate your person, and adore that sovereign God whose guardian power has ever watched over your life as a blessing and invaluable bulwark to your country. We, your admirers, will ever join our feeble efforts to support your victorious arm."—But pages can never relate what filled so many grateful hearts.

OBSERVATOR.

Eight Dollars Reward.

A ROBBERY was committed on the 17th instant, at the house of the subscriber in the township of Solebury by two negro men,—they carried off a quantity of cash; a pocket book, containing some valuable papers; wearing apparel, &c.—One of the negroes is a middle aged man, known by the name of John White, formerly a resident of Philadelphia, has an impediment in his speech—the other supposed to be a runaway, about eighteen years of age, of middle stature. Whoever secures the aforesaid villains so that they may be brought to justice, shall receive eight dollars reward, or four for either of them taken separately.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.

ELECTION OF FEDERAL REPRESENTATIVES.

Yesterday the citizens of this commonwealth voted for persons to serve them in the House of Representatives of the United States for the next biennial period. In this town little exertion was made by Federalists, and yet the result of the election gave their candidate almost two votes to one for his adversary. In fact the voting affords no proof of the strength of jacobinism, as prejudice against Mr Otis's profession, undoubtedly had some influence in procuring votes for Mr Heath.

The poll ended as follows, in this town:

	Hon. H G. Otis,	1726
	Wm. Heath,	906
Roxbury,	Otis,	68
	Heath,	166
Dorchester,	Otis,	56
	Heath,	133
Newton,	Otis,	74
	Heath,	10

The re election of the hon. Harrison Gray Otis, is beyond all doubt.

Second Middle District.

Charlestown,	Varnum,	240
	Bigelow,	112

We understand a letter has been received from Bourdeaux, which states, that the Embargo on American vessels has been renewed in all the ports of France. [Huzza, for Logan the peace maker.]

Yesterday the President of the United States honored the Castle in our harbor with a visit; and inspected the fortifications and troops composing the garrison. On his landing twenty-one 32 pounders were fired, and the same salute was repeated on his re-embarking in the barge. He was attended by several distinguished characters.

A CARD FROM MR. GERRY,

Mr Gerry being informed from various quarters, of the wishes of a number of his fellow-citizens of this district, that he will stand as a candidate for a representative in Congress, at the approaching election, has a grateful sense of the honor they are disposed to confer on him, and regrets the indispensible necessity he is under of declining it. He nevertheless assures them of the continuance of his exertions, in private life, to support the federal government, as the only effectual measure of union; on which, under Providence, rest the liberty, independence and welfare of ourselves and posterity.

WALPOLE (N. H.) Nov. 4.

In France, the council of Elders are in their dotage.

"Their voice, once big and round,
"Now whistles in the sound."

The council of striplings are playing blind-man's buff, and other childish games. These boys, without a preceptor, combine the levity of childhood with the unblushing effrontery of vicious age. In schemes to rob to deceive and to tyrannize, they are grown grey In correct legislation, in justice and in mercy, they are the weak infants of a day's growth. The Gang of Five act alternately the brilliant part of atheists, pirates and highwaymen.

The present ruler of the Algerines has remarked that he will be friendly to the United States, but that he must have presents to keep that friendship alive. This is the most honest avowal of the selfishness of human nature, and of the common foundation of one of our boasted virtues, that was ever made. The explicit declaration of this frank Algerine is worth a thousand circuitous demands made for American cash by X and Y and a lady, and other awkward "INTRIGUERS." France must go to Algiers, and acquire the moral graces and virtuous habits of the Barbary shore. A little Algerine morality is extremely wanted in Paris, and though no marketable commodity, ought to be purchased up by almost every Frenchman in power.

The tenth of August, the day of the massacre of the Swiss innocents, is celebrated as a high festival in France, and the President of the council of Five Hundred this year pronounced an oration on that memorable event. Who, but a French murderer would think of commemorating an act of assassination?

Old things in France are completely done away. There was formerly a street called "The street of our Lord," it is now called The street of Voltaire.

In Paris the gambling houses are all licensed, and such is the rage for play, that some of these temples of Mercury pay sixty thousand livres a decade for permission to indulge the eager gamester.

NEW-YORK, November 12.

On Saturday morning last, at eleven o'clock one of the Elizabeth-Town boats, left the Ferry Stairs, near White hall, for the Point about one o'clock a flaw of wind struck her, as she opened Newark Bay, and immediately upset her. We have spared no exertions to obtain an accurate statement of this melancholy affair. It appears there was a moderate W. N. W. sailing breeze; but very unsteady; that there were about twenty five or thirty passengers on board, ten or twelve of whom were drowned; eight bodies have already been found; there were five women, one only was saved. The vessels had merchandize, &c. to a considerable amount, part of which was preserved It was impossible to procure the names of the persons who were lost, for this day's paper, but we give them to-morrow, they were almost all citizens of New Jersey. Whether any censure can justly be attached to the Boatman we pretend not to determine, but believe, from his general character, which we are acquainted with, there cannot; we hope, however, it may serve as solemn warning to watermen in general. This much we think it our duty to state, that great credit is due to the activity and humanity of Mr. E. Haines, the superintendant of the ferry, who went early yesterday morning in search of the unfortunate persons who were thus hurried into eternity.

Among the victims we are sorry to mention the name of Benjamin Connel, Esq. of Chatham, a man whose death will be lamented not only by his family, but by all who knew him

On Saturday came down the North River from Catskill, to be fitted for sea with all expedition, the beautiful new ship Washington, pierced for 20 guns and owned by Messrs. Saltus, Son and Co. of this city; we understand she is to be purchased by government.

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

TUESDAY EVENING NOVEMBER 13.

Our readers will learn with pleasure, that John Rutledge, Esq. the spirited, ingenious and patriotic member from South Carolina, is elected to the next Congress.

General Pinckney arrived in town this day, from Trenton.

THE FOOLISH LOGAN

Actually unfolded is Budge to the Secretary of State, at Trenton. It is needless to say that he returned with a flea in his ear. Without exempting Logan in any measure from criminality in this nefarious business, we can assert on good grounds, that the whole matter is a delusive humbug. He brought with him no evidence of a change of disposition, other than those flimsy documents which have already met the public contempt.

The various reports of the arrest of Logan, the pretended Peace-maker, we have every reason to believe, are without foundation,—that daring usurper having by his activity evaded the pursuit of justice. It is said a horse was provided for him at the Fort, with which he immediately made off

"If deeds like his can here have pallage free, Bondmen and pageants will our Statesmen be."

A nest of cut-throats, who instead of reaping the fruits of their villainy, in the spoils of the American commerce, find themselves more properly disposed of, in a prison at Delaware, complain, forsooth, of the hardships of imprisonment. A man finding a thief or murderer in his house, would have the same cause for anxiety in supplying him with food and raiment, as we have to be scrupulous about the welfare of these villains. If they are uneasy however, under confinement, the Canal or any other public work, presents an eligible employment for them.

A late writer on the Yellow Fever, whose production is now circulating in some of the Country Gazettes, has the following passage, "It has fallen to my lot to make many important discoveries in regard to the nature of contagion." This is almost a match for one of Brothers's interpretations of a prophecy. And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse (meaning myself),"

One of the honorable faculty of Travellers, or chevaliers d' Industrie, who had traversed great part of England, France and Spain with one pair of Shoes, presented them on his return to the museum of an American University. Unhappily for the feelings of the Virtuosi, the succeeding President threw them out of the window.

Amongst other curiosities exhibited by a travelling showman in a country village, is a mummy hand of Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, and the arm of Lot's wife.

We are informed, that the Governor as commander in chief of the state militia, attended by the officers of the city and county brigades, will pay their respects to the Commander in Chief of the Armies of the United States, at 10 o'clock to-morrow forenoon.

About the beginning of August, 1797, the Yellow Fever made its appearance at Pine-street wharf, from whence it soon spread over the city, and continued its ravages until the middle of October—during which time there were one thousand three hundred deaths.

COMMUNICATION.

THE jacobins have taken up a trick of late, which they have borrowed from their friends, the French, of employing the ladies in their wicked manœuvres. We know that the sex has long had great influence in the cabinet of France; and its busy scenes may suit the proud turbulent genius of a French demoiselle well enough, but the mild, the amiable daughters of America will lose greatly by mingling in the stormy element of politics. Their parents, their husbands, their brothers, their children, and their country, will all have cause to lament, when their fair kinswomen are metamorphosed into politicians. It is your business, ladies, to spread the oil of peace and joy over the troubled waters of life, and not to contribute your efforts to increase its storms Depend on it, this ill-chosen business, if you pursue it, will spoil your beauty, as well as mar your happiness; it will plant your bosoms with thorns, and deform your lovely faces with wrinkles before their proper time. Be warned; retreat, before it is too late. A friend of the Fair.

"Modern Philosophy and Barbarism"

Is a work which contains thoughts sufficiently valuable to divert the eye of criticism from some inaccuracies of composition. Its arguments are ingenious, and its sources learned: and while we assent to the soundness of the philosophy, we are instructed by the virtues of the moralist. He rises boldly against that system, wherein affection and sympathy plead in vain the unalloyed dictates of nature; wherein sensibility weeps unheeded; and filial piety is treated with contempt. Such was the system of Lycurgus, and such the author has delineated to be the theory of Godwin.

And he shews, that could it be carried into effect, it would be productive of more enlarged injury and extensive evil, than the rules of Lycurgus, by deteriorating the mind of man by destroying the fabric of civilized society, and by hurrying mankind back to that state of ignorance and barbarism, from which they first set out.

He ably overthrows the principle of equality by an argument of the necessity of subordination; and to which we may add the natural principles of moral and physical inequality. The mischief arising from the other principle of modern philosophy, which is general utility, is well pointed out by him.—Friendship, paternal love, and all the sublime feelings of humanity, may thus be annihilated; because no man should be preserved but according to his usefulness. And may we not ask then, since gratitude may thus become a vice, may not parricide become a virtue? May I embrue my hands in the blood of my ancient parent, because worn out with years, in toil for my present and future felicity? What blasphemy against Nature and Humanity!!!

As to the argument of universal benevolence, it is a principle so vast, a circle so immense, that the mind is lost in it. The influence of all immediate duties cease, the mind becomes quiescent, and the man deteriorates. Destroy too the controul of affections, the anarchy of licentiousness ensues. Thus man will tumble into all the brutifying effects of the uncontrouled gratification of the passions; serious and sublime reflection be annihilated; and these refined philosophers be undistinguishable from the animals were it not for their risible muscles and erect form.

Whoever peruses Mr. Proby's book will perceive that the modern system of philosophy is a compound of duplicity. It pretends to encrease the powers of man, and narrows them to selfishness. It appears as enlightened philosophy, while gloomy superstition and organized barbarism lurk beneath. It holds out unlimited independence, and chains down man by the most degrading slavery. Its doctrine of Universal Equality holds out the olive branch of peace, whilst the inequalities of nature must unsheath the sword of war. It pretends to exalt reason, and reduces man to mechanical motion.—Strip it of its fascinating glare of novelty, all its meritricious ornaments, and we shall behold barbaric enslaving institutions, more injurious to man than those of the Spartan Legislator. Nay, it dooms man to the woods, a wild savage and naked barbarian.

From an EUROPEAN MAGAZINE.

THOUGH I believe that health is maintained by a temperate use of the good things of this world, I cannot resist the temptation of relating a story which is somewhat contradictory.

In a cause before lord chief justice Holt, two farmers disputed about an old way over one of their grounds. To prove there had been no way formerly, a very old man was called, who, notwithstanding his great age, appeared strong and healthy. My lord, on hearing him say he remembered the grounds four score and six years, asked him how old he was; ninety-six replied the countryman. "Ninety six!" cry'd my lord, in admiration, "and so strong and lusty? Pray, friend, how have you lived?" "Why, please you my lord (says the old man) I have lived on our country fare, chiefly on bread, butter, milk, eggs, and such sort. I was never much a flesh eater, and never drank any thing strong in my life; no, not so much as ale. I never was overtaken in liquor in all my days, and was never sick in my life." The judge, surprised at the account, addressed himself to the gentlemen at the bar, and greatly commended so rare an example of temperance, and set forth what blessings of health and long life attended it. When the witnesses on the other side came to be examined, an old man swore that there had been an ancient way over the grounds, and that he remembered it ninety-eight years ago. "Ninety-eight? (says my lord) why how old are you?" "Come next Shrove-tide (replies the man briskly) I shall enter on my hundred and sixteenth year." "Bless me! (says my lord) you seem as healthy and vigorous as the other witness. You see again, gentlemen, the effects of temperance. These men have never debauched or debilitated nature. You, old father, have lived such another sort of a life, as your neighbor there." "Not I, indeed (replied the old man, laughing,) No, no, he is a milk-sop, but I love good strong ale, and have loved it from my cradle. I have drank freely all my life; no man more so in the whole parish; and I have not gone to bed this many and many a year, without being happy It is good strong drink, my lord that has given me a strong old age." "Nay then, gentlemen, (says my lord) I find it is all one, drink or drink not; and all my encomiums on temperance, may be lost on you."

Walpole, November 3.

A small pamphlet, printed, it is presumed, at Fairhaven, the sink of sedition, the Mons Sacer of Vermont, but purporting, in the rebellious cant of the title page, to issue from "Constitution Hill," has been pretty generally disseminated by Lyon among his adherents. We believe it constituted part of the evidence against him in his late trial before the Circuit Court. This paltry pamphlet, seductive only of gross ignorance and desperate villainy, is affirmed by the Leonine faction, to be a genuine epistle from Joel Barlow, resident in France, to Mr. Nicholas, a member of the lower house in Congress. We have a respect for the talents of Mr. Barlow, and cannot easily credit, notwithstanding his foreign attachments and his political theory, that he has forsaken his first love, and become an absolute traitor to his country. If this letter be not spurious Barlow may continue to be praised as an elegant poet, but must inevitably be considered as a corrupt minister and a shameless apostate. But neither the style, nor the sentiments of this letter can destroy our incredulity, concerning its genuineness. Destitute of wit, genius and argument it is nothing but a string of vulgar and incoherent curses against our government. Such, however, is the paucity of correct political information in that quarter of Vermont, such the criminal assiduity of Lyon, and such the ignorant and malcontent habits of his dupes and devotees, that the above libel has had a very mischievous operation.

Schooner Maria Matilda, Morse, Havanna, Sugars, &c.

Ship Perseverance, Bourdeaux, 60 days—Wines, Brandy, &c.

Brig Molly, Killey, Havanna—Sugars and Molasses—George Peters

——, George Hardinge, Havanna—Sugars and Molasses—George Peters.

Arrived ship Perseverence, Norton, of New-York, from Bourdeaux, left there the 12th of September, on the 13th, at Paulliac, was informed by the prize master of the Prince of Asturias, just arrived there a a prize to the privateer brig Decade, that she had the latter end of August captured an American ship from Philadelphia for London, called the Two Friends, as well as he could recollect—The same day passed the brig Mary, Russel, sent in a prize to the Spartia privateer, on her passage from Philadelphia, to Hamburg. Left the Cordovan the 17th and on the 21st saw ten sail of large vessels, soon afterwards perceived four others following them, at sunset one of the latter, a brig, hauled her wind, chased, and boarded the Perseverance at 10—she proved to be the British brig Sylph, capt. White who examined the ship's papers and dismissed her after informing that the ten vessels we had seen, were a ship of the line and nine frigates French and full of troops, supposed to be bound to Ireland or the West-Indies, and that the three following them were British frigates, and that he was dispatched to the admiral at Cork to keep a good look out for them; 23d was boarded by the British frigate La Nymph, capt. Frazier, 7 days out from Portsmouth, on a cruise, who treated us remarkably politely and informed that the British frigate Anson had just sent in the French Flora, from Bourdeaux, on a cruise, and that the day before he taken the brig George, from New-York bound to Madeira; Oct. 1st was boarded by the French privateer brig Sans culottes, capt. Duport, out 20 days from Coruna, on a chaise, and politely treated, capt. D. was shewn the decree taking off the embargo on American vessels in France and said that hereafter he should not molest any American vessels; 15th fell in with the brig Ann, Morrison, out 16 days from Newburyport, bound to Trinidad, with 4 feet water in the hold and the leak increasing, there being no possibility of keeping her afloat, capt. M. and his crew deserted he and came home in the Perseverance. In the Perseverance came passengers Mr. Gardner (owner) Mr. John Lynch, of this city, and Dr. Logan.

Arrived at the Fort.

MADE their eſcape from the Gaol in the borough of Lancaſter, on Saturday evening laſt, between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock, two French priſoners, part of the crew of La Croyable.

The one named Etienne Auſtin, a native of Bordeaux in France, 26 years of age, about 5 feet 6 inches high, dark eyes and complexion, by trade a carpenter, ſuppoſed to be unacquainted with the Engliſh or German language. Had on when he went away, a white hat, pantaloons, and ſhort jacket, light made, and probably took with him ſome other clothes.

The other named Peter Duprieux, a native of Bujoin in France, 20 years of age, about 5 feet 8 inches high, grey eyes, dark complexion, a ſeaman by occupation, a dirty ill-looking fellow. Had on when he went away, a blue ſailor's jacket, with large tow trowſers, an old wool hat, ſpeaks imperfect German.

Alſo, made his eſcape the ſame day, about nine o'clock in the morning, from the ſame gaol, a negro man named Peter Huſton, about 5 feet 4 inches high, of a ſmiling countenance, lately convicted of a felony in this county. Had on when he went away, a long blue coat, a pair of white trowſers, both ragged, and a black hat.

Twenty-five dollars will be paid for apprehending and ſecuring in any goal, each or either of the above named Frenchmen, and Ten dollars for the negro, by Chriſtian Carpenter, jun. Sheriff.

Forty Dollars Reward

FOR APPREHENDING
A GENTLEMAN NEGRO,

BY name GEORGE or GEORGE PARKER, the property of the ſubſcriber, who has thought proper on the night of the 21ſt inſt. to elope from his maſter without any provocation or juſt cauſe; he was formerly the property of Beckwith Butler, eſq. and lived a conſiderable time with ——— Pottenger, who kept tavern in Frederickburg, having ſeen much company and travelled with ſeveral gentlemen through different parts of this ſtate, he is much known. It is therefore conjectured he will puſh for ſome of the northern cities or towns as he has diſcovered an averſion to plantation work, though he may perhaps have croſſed the ridge where he has a brother belonging to major Butler.

This fellow is about five feet ſeven inches high, well proportioned and walks active and briſk, his countenance is open and agreeable enough when in good humour; he can hardly be ſurpaſt in ſhrewdneſs, and is a very capable waiting-man, houſe ſervant, barber, &c. To deſcribe his dreſs would be uſeleſs, as he poſſeſſed a variety of clothes, though when dreſſed lately, he wore a green coat bound with white ferreting and ſpotted jacket and breeches. Whoever brings him home or ſecures in goal in this or any other State the ſaid ſlave, ſo that I may get him again, ſhall have the above reward.

ALEXANDER VASS.
Falmouth. Oct. 23, 1798.

AN ORATION,
Pronounced July 4, 1798,
At the requeſt of the Inhabitants of the Town of BOSTON, in commemoration of the anniverſary of American Independence.
By JOSIAH QUINCY.

"The inroads upon our public liberty, call for reparation—The wrongs we have ſuſtained, call for—Juſtice. That Reparation and that Juſtice, may yet be obtained, by Union, Spirit, and Firmneſs. But to divide and conquer was the maxim of the Devil in the garden of Eden, and to diſunite and enſlave hath been the principle of all his votaries from that period to the preſent."
